

"On the Relation between Truth and Knowledge"

Abstract: For someone to know proposition p inferentially it is not enough that his belief in p and his justification for believing p covary with the truth of p through a sphere of possibilities. A further condition on inferential knowledge is that p 's truth-maker is identical with, or causally related to, the state of affairs the justification is grounded in.